

CITY OF MANCHESTER, NEW HAMPSHIRE
ZONING BOARD OF ADJUSTMENT

In re Case No. ZBA2026-063 — 26 Titus Avenue (Tax Map 554, Lot 17C)

R-1B Zoning District, Ward 9

MOTION FOR REHEARING

Pursuant to RSA 677:2

NOW COME Nickolas J. Levasseur and Alison Famisan-Levasseur of 30 Mystic Street, Manchester, New Hampshire 03103 [and the abutters identified in Exhibit A,] and respectfully move that this Board grant a rehearing of its decision of September 10, 2026 granting the variances requested in the above-captioned case. In support of this motion, and in satisfaction of RSA 677:2, the Movants set forth below every ground upon which it is claimed that the decision is unlawful or unreasonable.

I. STANDING AND TIMELINESS

1. The Movants own and reside at 30 Mystic Street, Manchester. Their property [abuts / lies within 200 feet of] the subject parcel and they are abutters within the meaning of RSA 672:3. They appeared and gave testimony in opposition at the public hearing on September 10, 2026. They are therefore persons entitled to apply for a rehearing under RSA 677:2, both as abutters as defined by RSA 672:3 and as parties to the action and proceedings.
2. The Board rendered its decision on September 10, 2026. This motion is filed within thirty days of that decision and is therefore timely under RSA 677:2. The Board's written decision issued on September 14, 2026.
3. The Movants set forth each ground fully and separately below, mindful that under RSA 677:3, I, no ground not set forth in this motion may later be urged upon appeal.

II. THE DECISION COMPLAINED OF

4. The applicant, T & L 2018, LLC, by its agent Doug MacGuire, P.E., of The Dubai Group, Inc., sought relief to construct two townhouse buildings containing thirteen multifamily dwelling units on a lot having 49,484 square feet of buildable area where 78,000 square feet is required for the use proposed.
5. On September 10, 2026 the Board granted relief from six sections of the Land Use Code: §4.3-A.1.C (Multifamily Dwellings); §8.1.2 (styled by the City "Planned Development Lot Area"); §5.3.1.E (Townhouse Building Type — Districts Permitted); §5.3.1.E.5.B (Maximum Height in Stories); §5.3.1.E.5.C (Maximum Height in Feet); and §8.7.2.F.2 (Parking Location for Planned Developments). The vote was four to one, Member Carnevale dissenting. No condition was attached to the grant.
6. The Board's written decision issued on September 14, 2026, upon the City's printed form "Variance Notice of Decision," signed by Chairman Robert Breault. It recites the relief granted, sets out five findings of fact, and leaves blank the printed fields for "Condition(s)" and "Explanation." No other statement of the Board's reasons has been issued.

III. THE GOVERNING STANDARD, AND THE DECISION'S STATED BASIS

7. A variance may be granted only upon affirmative findings on all five criteria of RSA 674:33, I(a)(2)(A) through (E). The burden of proof on every criterion rests upon the applicant, and upon the applicant alone. Harrington v. Town of Warner, 152 N.H. 74 (2005). A failure of proof on any one criterion requires denial.
8. It follows from that allocation that a criterion the applicant has not supported cannot be found satisfied on the strength of a statement made from the bench. Whatever a member may properly draw upon in deliberating, the burden the statute places on the applicant is not discharged by the body deciding whether the applicant has carried it.

9. “Unnecessary hardship” under RSA 674:33, I(b) requires special conditions of the property that distinguish it from other properties in the area. Conditions personal to the owner, and the owner’s preferred or more profitable use, are not special conditions of the land. Bacon v. Town of Enfield, 150 N.H. 468 (2004); Olszak v. Town of New Hampton, 139 N.H. 723 (1995).

The decision’s stated basis

10. At the close of the hearing the Chair asked Vice Chair St. Pierre to state the findings of fact. He did so, speaking for approximately two minutes, pausing only to decline a request from the City’s staff that he repeat a finding, and then immediately moved that relief be granted from all six sections. The motion was seconded and carried four to one.

11. No other member stated findings of fact. No other member discussed the findings recited. The Vice Chair prefaced the recitation by saying he would “get into some findings of fact, for Michael’s purposes” — that is, for the member of the City’s staff who records them. Partway through, that staff member addressed the Chair: “Craig, could you please repeat that — you’re going really fast.” The finding was not repeated. The Vice Chair answered to the effect that he would come back to him later, continued to the end of the recitation, and moved the relief approximately seventy seconds after the request was made. The vote was taken about thirty seconds after that. The findings were never repeated, never read back, and never discussed.

12. Those statements are therefore not stray commentary from the bench. They are the findings of fact the Board adopted, by the same vote that granted the relief. If the findings are unsupported by the record, or are contradicted by it, the decision they were given to justify cannot stand.

13. There are accordingly two records of the Board’s reasons, and they do not agree. The written decision of September 14 carries five findings. The recitation of September 10 carried nine, together with a stated conclusion upon each of the five statutory criteria. Three of the nine are absent from the written decision, three more are materially altered, and not one of the five conclusions appears in it. The Movants address the written decision first, as the Board’s operative statement of its reasons, and then the recited findings, which are the only material in the record capable of supporting the written decision upon the criteria it does not address.

IV. GROUNDS FOR REHEARING

A. The written decision of September 14, 2026.

Ground 1. The written decision contains no finding upon two of the five criteria, and the record does not supply what it omits, RSA 676:3, I.

14. RSA 676:3, I, as amended effective August 23, 2022, provides that a local land use board’s final written decision “shall include specific written findings of fact that support the decision.” The Movants acknowledge that the same paragraph prescribes automatic reversal only for a disapproval issued without such findings, and prescribes no remedy for an approval. The requirement itself is stated without qualification, and it attaches to this decision. A variance may issue only upon affirmative findings on all five criteria of RSA 674:33, I(a)(2), and this Board’s own By-Laws, Article VI, reflect that structure: to obtain a variance “an applicant must make a persuasive showing to each item in five-part criteria.”

15. The written decision sets out five findings of fact, and these are the whole of them:

“The lot is unique at 1.1 acres with steep slopes.”

“The paper street provides an additional buffer from Mystic Street.”

“The proposed planned development eliminates the need for individual curb cuts on Calef Rd. and preserves on-street parking.”

“The property is located in a transitional area of large multi-family dwellings to the south, with a cemetery to the west, and a school to the east.”

“The applicant reworked the plan to eliminate several counts.”

16. Nothing in those five findings addresses whether substantial justice is done, RSA 674:33, I(a)(2)(C). Nothing in them addresses whether the values of surrounding properties are diminished, RSA 674:33, I(a)(2)(D). The fifth finding — that the applicant reworked its plan — answers to no criterion at all. And the decision nowhere states that any of the five criteria is satisfied. It states five facts and grants the relief.

17. The Movants are aware of the authority the City will cite. In Kalil v. Town of Dummer Zoning Board of Adjustment, 155 N.H. 307 (2007), the Court held that “the absence of findings, at least where there is no request therefor, is not in and of itself error.” In Rochester City Council v. Rochester Zoning Board of Adjustment, No. 2017-0501 (N.H. Sept. 7, 2018), where a written decision granting a use variance did not address unnecessary hardship, the Court examined whether the record supported the decision and found no error, because hardship “was addressed in the variance application, and the ZBA discussed whether the applicant demonstrated unnecessary hardship.”

18. Neither case disposes of this one, for two reasons. First, both were decided under RSA 676:3, I as it stood before August 23, 2022, when the paragraph contained no requirement that findings support an approval. The sentence now in the statute was added by 2022 N.H. Laws 272:73, and the Movants have found no reported decision construing it. Second, and more to the point, Rochester excuses the absence of a written finding only where the record supports the decision. It does not excuse a finding the record cannot support. The Court there could look past the written decision because the criterion had been addressed in the application and discussed by the board. The question here is therefore what the record contains upon the two criteria this written decision does not address.

19. Upon criterion (D), the applicant, asked directly whether it had obtained a broker price opinion, answered: “so no, we did not.” Its written memorandum offered on this criterion only that there is “ample buffering” and that the project “would not negatively affect surrounding existing properties.” The only other material before the Board was a statement from the bench by the member who recited the findings, addressed in Ground 3. Upon criterion (C), the applicant’s entire written showing was that “[t]he benefits to the applicant in constructing residential which is far more conducive to the property provides substantial justice,” addressed in Ground 5. This is not a record in which, as in Rochester, the criteria were addressed by the applicant and discussed by the Board. It is a record in which the applicant disclaimed evidence upon one criterion and weighed only its own benefit upon the other. A written decision silent upon both, resting upon such a record, is not a decision supported by specific written findings of fact within the meaning of RSA 676:3, I — under the statute as amended or as it stood before.

20. To the extent Kalil turns upon whether findings were requested, the Movants request them now: that any decision upon rehearing state specific written findings of fact addressed to each of the five criteria of RSA 674:33, I(a)(2), so that the basis of the Board’s decision upon each is stated by the Board rather than inferred from the record by others.

Ground 2. The relief granted was unconditional, while the findings supporting it rest upon mitigation the decision does not require.

21. The motion upon which the Board voted was to “grant relief from §4.3-A.1.C, §8.1.2, §5.3.1.E, §5.3.1.E.5.B, §5.3.1.E.5.C and §8.7.2.F.2, noting that we’ve removed the three counts that the applicant’s corrected.” It was seconded and carried four to one. No condition of any kind was attached to the relief, and the written decision confirms it: the printed field reading “Condition(s):” is followed by a blank line, and nothing is written upon it.

22. The findings recited in support of that motion depend upon mitigation throughout. They recite “additional buffers... beyond what the plan development requires in itself,” and the Vice Chair had stated that “some of the primary concerns that we hear over and over are addressed by the enforced buffer in a plan development such as this” and that “a lot of the other problems are addressed in the plan review process.” Nothing in the decision requires any of it. No landscape plan was submitted, no buffer dimension was fixed, and no condition obliges the applicant to provide or maintain a buffer of any depth. Nor could a condition upon this applicant have secured the buffer principally relied upon, the 130 to 135 feet of woods being on the Mystic Street owners’ land.

23. Ground 7 says no evidence supported the buffer finding. The point here is different: even taken as made, the finding assumes what the relief does not secure. The Board was not without the means. Article XIII of its own By-Laws provides that upon a variance it “may impose conditions or stipulations that must be adhered to by the present and subsequent owner(s).” It imposed none. Nor does deferral of concerns to “the plan review process” answer this. The findings did not rest upon whatever buffer the Planning Board might later require; they rested upon buffers “beyond what the plan development requires in itself,” which by their own terms nothing requires. The criteria of RSA 674:33, I(a)(2) had to be satisfied upon the record before this Board when it voted, not upon the prospect of later action by another body that this decision does not compel.

B. Grounds addressed to the criteria of RSA 674:33, I(a)(2), and to the findings recited on September 10.

24. The grounds in this and the following two parts address the findings recited at the hearing. They are stated for two reasons: because, under Rochester, the sufficiency of a written decision that omits a criterion is tested against the record, and the recited findings are the only material in the record capable of supporting the written decision upon the criteria it does not address; and to preserve them under RSA 677:3, I, in the event the Board or a reviewing court treats the recitation as the operative findings.

Ground 3. The applicant offered no evidence whatever on RSA 674:33, I(a)(2)(D), and the only evidence supporting that finding was supplied from the bench by the member who recited it.

25. Member Carnevale asked the applicant whether it had obtained a broker price opinion to support its assertion that surrounding property values would not be diminished. Its engineer answered: “so no, we did not,” and offered to obtain one if the Board wished. The Board did not ask him to.

26. The applicant produced no appraisal, no market study, no comparable sale, and no opinion of any person qualified to give one. Its entire written submission on this criterion is that there is “ample buffering” and that the project “would not negatively affect surrounding existing properties.” That buffer is 130 to 135 feet of woods on the Mystic Street owners’ rear yards — land the applicant does not own, and which its own engineer conceded those owners “have the right to develop... or expand... or cut.”

27. Approximately eight minutes after that concession, and in the course of reciting the findings of fact, Vice Chair St. Pierre stated:

“Also, I am a real estate broker, and I’m not aware of any circumstance where a development of this nature in Manchester has diminished a property around it. I’ve never seen a report or evidence of that. In general, reasonably well thought out development increases values.”

28. This was not evidence. Article XIV of this Board’s By-Laws provides that an “[o]ath [is] taken by those wishing to give testimony,” and the Chair administered that oath at the opening of the meeting. The statement was not sworn, because it was not offered as testimony at all.

29. The Movants do not suggest that a member must set aside what he knows of the City. A zoning board is a lay body drawn from the community precisely because its members know it. A member who observes that a street carries no parking, or that a slope drains poorly, tells the Board something any person in the room can confirm or contradict on the spot — a capacity every member shares and every abutter may answer.

30. The statement at issue is of another order. It described no condition of this locality. It announced a general conclusion about the effect of development upon market values, resting upon a professional credential the other members do not hold and upon transactions found nowhere in the file. Nothing in it could be confirmed by driving to Titus Avenue. Nor could it be: RSA 674:33, I(a)(2)(D) asks whether surrounding values will be diminished, which is a prediction about a market, not an observation about a place. Evidence upon that criterion is necessarily opinion evidence, and opinion evidence is precisely the kind that must be open to examination.

31. The distinction is therefore not one of status but of function: knowledge of the area helps a board weigh a case; expert opinion from the bench makes one. Had the applicant filed this same statement over a broker’s signature, it would have been evidence upon criterion (D), and the Movants could have answered it — with an appraisal, with cross-examination, with an inquiry into which comparables it rested upon. Offered from the bench, it carried the same weight and admitted of no answer. It came twenty-five minutes after the last call for opposition, in the course of reciting the findings, and less than a minute before the motion to grant.

32. The defect is not merely that opinion took the place of evidence. A member furnished the very proof the applicant had conceded, minutes earlier, that it did not possess; he then recited it as a finding of fact; he then moved to grant the relief; and he then voted upon the sufficiency of what he had himself supplied. The applicant's burden under Harrington was not carried. It was relieved.

33. The criterion was neither incidental nor conceded. It was put in question by a member of the Board, answered in the negative by the applicant, and then supplied by the member who recited the findings and moved the relief. This is the record against which, under Rochester, the written decision's silence upon criterion (D) must be tested. See Ground 1.

Ground 4. The findings on the public interest and the spirit of the ordinance were measured against the stated intent of a district in which this parcel does not lie, and no finding was made against the intent of the district in which it does, RSA 674:33, I(a)(2)(A) and (B).

34. The statement of the district's intent that reached the Board was not the one the Land Use Code contains. Table 3.3-A states the intent of the R-1B district as "to maintain higher-density neighborhoods of single-family, detached dwellings located in outlying areas of the City." The applicant's written memorandum told the Board, under the heading "The spirit of the Ordinance is observed because," that "[t]he spirit of the zoning Ordinance in the R-1B zone is to provide higher density residential neighborhoods," and repeated it in its hardship section. That rendering substitutes "provide" for "maintain" and omits "of single-family, detached dwellings" — the words that decide whether thirteen townhouse units observe the district's intent. No accurate statement of the R-1B intent appears anywhere in the record.

35. The written decision finds the parcel "located in a transitional area of large multi-family dwellings to the south, with a cemetery to the west, and a school to the east," as the recitation had placed it in "a transitional area." R-1B carries no such designation. Table 3.3-A assigns the transitional role to the R-2 district, which "forms a loose band around the more densely developed areas of the City, transitioning between mixed-use centers and the lower densities of the single-family districts." The spirit of the ordinance was therefore weighed against the stated purpose of a district other than the one that governs this parcel.

36. The defect is an absent finding rather than a disputed one. RSA 674:33, I(a)(2)(A) and (B) require affirmative findings that the variance is not contrary to the public interest and that the spirit of the ordinance is observed, and that spirit is measured by the ordinance's own statement of intent for the district in which the parcel lies. The record contains no finding identifying the intent of R-1B, and none reconciling it with the relief granted. Upon this record the Board could not have made such a finding, the only statement of R-1B's intent before it having been the applicant's altered one.

Ground 5. Substantial justice was not weighed, RSA 674:33, I(a)(2)(C).

37. The applicant's entire written showing on this criterion is that "[t]he benefits to the applicant in constructing residential which is far more conducive to the property provides substantial justice." The governing question is whether any loss to the individual is outweighed by a gain to the general public. The applicant weighed only its own benefit, which is the one interest this criterion does not measure. Nor is the loss it does have of the kind this criterion weighs. On its own plan the parcel yields five conforming lots, so denial costs the applicant only the difference between a conforming use and a more profitable one. That is the ordinance applying as written, not an injustice. Olszak, supra.

Ground 6. No special condition of the property was identified, and the hardship claim is contradicted by the applicant's own sealed exhibit.

38. The applicant's written memorandum states that the parcel "can support five (5) single family home lots meeting the underlying zoning." Its By-Right Subdivision Plan, submitted with the application, depicts five conforming lots, each having more than the 6,000 square feet of buildable area the ordinance requires.

39. At the hearing the applicant told the Board the opposite. Its engineer posed a hypothetical of his own construction: "If you could have nine single family homes here by right and you can't get more than one or two, is that a reasonable use of the property?" Its principal stated: "the hardship is the steep slopes. We can't essentially build the houses."

40. No drawing, grading analysis, soils report, or cost estimate was offered in support of the oral claim. Minutes earlier the same engineer had conceded that the arithmetic runs the other way: "this lot would support more than what we're showing here, just physically based on buildable area divided by 6,000.”

41. The Board was asked to disbelieve the applicant’s own stamped plan upon the applicant’s unsupported say-so, and did so. A finding of unnecessary hardship that rests upon an assertion the applicant’s own submitted exhibit refutes is unreasonable.

42. Further, the principal physical feature identified — slope — is not a special condition distinguishing this parcel. The City’s Zoning Review deducted 10,922 square feet of slope from 60,406 square feet gross, leaving 49,484 square feet of buildable area. That is the ordinance operating as written, and it leaves more than eight times the 6,000 square feet required per planned-development unit. The applicant’s own By-Right Subdivision Plan was drawn upon this same land after this same deduction and still shows five conforming lots. A deduction that leaves a parcel abundantly buildable is not a hardship arising from special conditions of the land within the meaning of RSA 674:33, I(b). Bacon, supra.

43. What the applicant in truth advanced was that a conforming five-lot subdivision would be less profitable or less convenient than thirteen townhouse units. That is not unnecessary hardship. Olszak, supra. The applicant acquired the parcel as vacant land at public auction in 2024, a circumstance the Board may weigh. Hill v. Town of Chester, 146 N.H. 291 (2001).

C. Errors of fact in the findings adopted.

Ground 7. The findings adopted by the Board are contradicted by the testimony given at the same hearing, or rest upon matter not in the record.

44. The findings recited and adopted include the following. Each is set against what the record before the Board actually contained.

45. On-street parking. The written decision finds that the planned development “eliminates the need for individual curb cuts on Calef Rd. and preserves on-street parking,” as the recitation had found that it “reduces the need for curb cuts on Calef Road and preserves existing on street parking.” Two witnesses had told the Board there is no on-street parking on Calef Road to preserve. Kate Marquis: “Anything south of that, you’ll notice if you drive there, there’s big no parking signs.” Jennifer Allard: “No one can park on Calef. You’re not allowed to park on Calef.”

46. The enforced buffer. The findings rely upon an “enforced buffer” and upon “additional buffers... beyond what the plan development requires in itself.” No landscape plan and no buffer design was submitted with the application. The City’s Zoning Review records a Type 2 buffer as “Can comply,” which states a possibility and not a proposal. An abutter had asked the Board minutes earlier: “There’s no plan that shows how far back he’s going to go. Is he going to go right up to that 25 feet and take all the trees there?”

47. Traffic safety. The Vice Chair stated that “by removing curb cuts into Calef, I think we improve safety tremendously,” and found the entrance to be “off of Titus Avenue, which is in general safer to turn on to than the busier Calef.” No traffic count, sight-distance analysis, crash history, or professional opinion of any kind appears in the file. The comparison between the two streets was made by no witness.

48. These are not incidental remarks. They span three of the five statutory criteria, they constitute the whole of the Board’s stated reasoning, and the decision was voted immediately upon their recitation without any other member offering findings of his or her own.

D. Errors of process.

Ground 8. The Board weighed the application against tests the statute does not contain, and never reached the test it does, RSA 674:33, I(a)(2) and I(b).

49. In reciting the findings the Vice Chair stated, “my overall thought on this is that I do believe this is the best plan for this lot.” He framed the weighing itself as a choice between the application and the conforming five-lot subdivision shown on the applicant’s own plan: “so when I weigh these, I look at, if they’re allowed to do or say they did do those five houses, is that more in benefit of safety? Is it more in benefit of the neighbors, of the spirit?” No member offered a different frame, and the vote was taken upon those findings.

50. Neither question appears in the statute. RSA 674:33, I(a)(2) enumerates five criteria, and neither the best-plan question nor the comparative one is among them. Unnecessary hardship under RSA 674:33, I(b) asks in both of its branches whether special conditions of the property that distinguish it from others in the area make conformance unreasonable: under I(b)(1), whether “no fair and substantial relationship exists between the general public purposes of the ordinance provision and the specific application of that provision to the property” and whether “the proposed use is a reasonable one”; and, if that is not established, under I(b)(2), whether “the property cannot be reasonably used in strict conformance with the ordinance.” A board that has decided it prefers one lawful development to another has answered neither question.

51. That the frame was the wrong one was put to the Board before it voted, by a member of the Board. Member Carnevale told the applicant: “I’m having a tough time seeing how an actual hardship exists that would override... this is not an area that’s zoned for townhouses. In essence it’s striking me as the argument is it would be good if it were zoned for townhouses... But that’s not what it’s zoned for.” The objection was not answered and was not discussed. The findings that followed adopted the comparative frame notwithstanding it, and the member who stated the objection cast the dissenting vote.

52. The substitution was not harmless. Measured against the five-lot subdivision, a proposal may appear to reduce curb cuts, add buffers, or move development off a slope, and the findings recite each of those comparisons. Measured against the statute, the same record shows a parcel the applicant’s own stamped plan proves can be used in conformance. The comparative frame let the Board find hardship without ever asking whether conformance was unreasonable, which is the only question I(b) puts to it. That is an error of law, and it is independent of the sufficiency of the evidence addressed in the grounds above.

Ground 9. Relief was granted from the planned-development lot area requirement without any evidence or finding addressing that standard.

53. The minimum lot area for a planned development is fixed by §8.7.2.A of the Land Use Code, which requires the total of the lot areas required for each principal structure together with the additional lot area required by the number of dwelling units in each. It was among the standards from which relief was granted, the Zoning Review and the public notice identifying it as §8.1.2. The Movants take the requirement as the City computed it and rest nothing upon the numbering. The applicant offered no evidence directed to that standard, and the Board adopted no finding that mentions it. Nothing in the record states what the standard requires on this parcel, by how much the proposal departs from it, or why a departure of that size satisfies any of the five criteria.

54. The departure is not marginal. The City’s Zoning Review states the requirement for this proposal as 78,000 square feet of lot area for thirteen dwelling units, which is 6,000 square feet per unit, and states the lot has 49,484 square feet of buildable area. At the standard the City itself applied, this lot supports eight units. Thirteen were granted.

55. What the applicant did offer on density was directed to the standards of the R-M district, under which it asserted seventeen units would be permitted, and to the heights allowed for townhouses in districts where townhouses are permitted. This parcel lies in neither. The Board’s variance power is not in question: RSA 674:33, I(a)(2) authorizes a variance from the terms of the ordinance, and I(b)(3) applies the same hardship definition to “a restriction on use... or any other requirement of the ordinance.” What the Board cannot do is substitute another district’s standards for those of the district in which the parcel lies. That is reclassification, reserved under RSA 675 to the local legislative body, in Manchester the Board of Mayor and Aldermen. Evidence of what the R-M district would permit is therefore not evidence upon any of the five criteria as applied to this parcel.

E. The minutes of the meeting.

Ground 10. The minutes of the September 10, 2026 meeting, RSA 676:3, II and RSA 91-A:2, II.

56. RSA 676:3, II requires that the minutes of the meeting and the written decision be placed on file and made available for public inspection within five business days of the vote. Article X of this Board’s own By-Laws states the same: “Notice of the Board’s Decisions will be made available for public inspection within five days. (RSA 676:3).” Separately, RSA 91-A:2, II requires minutes recording the names of the members, the persons appearing before the body, a brief description of the subject matter discussed and the final decisions, the start and end times of the meeting, the name of the person who produced them, and the names of the members who made and seconded each motion, open to public inspection not more than five business days after the meeting.

57. The Variance Notice of Decision is not minutes. It records none of the particulars that RSA 91-A:2, II requires. It does not name the members sitting, the persons who appeared, or the members who made and seconded the motion; it gives no description of the subject matter discussed; and it states neither the times of the meeting nor its author.

58. [State the status of the minutes as of the filing date: whether minutes of the September 10, 2026 meeting have been made available for public inspection, and if so upon what date. If they were not filed within five business days of the vote, add: Because the minutes of the meeting at which the vote was taken were not filed within five business days pursuant to RSA 676:3, II, the Movants have the right under RSA 677:2 to amend this motion, including the grounds therefor, within 30 days after the date on which the written decision was actually filed, and they expressly reserve that right.]

F. Ground preserved under RSA 677:3, I.

Ground 11. Preserved: the Board applied a different standard to comparable applications heard the same evening.

59. The Movants state this ground to preserve it under RSA 677:3, I, and do not urge it as the principal basis for rehearing.

60. In Case No. ZBA2026-078 (26 Sullivan Street), heard the same evening, the Board declined to vote upon requested variances because an elevation on the applicant's plan set was mislabeled, a member stating that he was "not comfortable voting on anything that's been represented here on paper" and "not comfortable... granting variances on something that's incomplete." The case was continued. In the present case the applicant's oral hardship claim was contradicted by its own sealed subdivision plan, and no continuance was sought or granted.

61. In Case No. ZBA2026-080 (374 Thornton Street), also heard the same evening, the same slope provision reduced a parcel to 1,812 square feet of buildable area out of 13,955 square feet gross — a deduction of 87% — and relief was required because the remainder fell below the minimum. Here the deduction was 18% and left 49,484 square feet. The applicant in that case stated in its written narrative that "[t]he intent of the steep slope section of the ordinance is to prevent creating lots that cannot be built on."

V. THE RECORD

62. The Movants incorporate by reference the complete case file in ZBA2026-063, including the application, the Zoning Review, the By-Right Subdivision Plan, the applicant's memorandum of May 20, 2026, and the City's audio and video recording of the public hearing of September 10, 2026. Quotations above are drawn from that recording, which the Movants have requested under RSA 91-A.

VI. RELIEF REQUESTED

WHEREFORE, the Movants respectfully request that this Board:

A. Grant a rehearing of its decision of September 10, 2026 in Case No. ZBA2026-063;

B. Upon rehearing, require the applicant to carry its burden on each of the five criteria of RSA 674:33, I(a)(2), and in particular to produce competent evidence on the effect of the proposal upon surrounding property values;

C. Require that any finding of unnecessary hardship identify the special condition of the property relied upon, and reconcile that finding with the applicant's own By-Right Subdivision Plan;

D. Address the planned-development lot area requirement of §8.7.2.A upon evidence, and state the basis for relief from the lot area it requires;

E. State, upon the record, the evidentiary basis for each finding of fact adopted in support of any grant, and in particular for any finding that surrounding property values will not be diminished;

F. Issue any written decision upon a grant with specific written findings of fact addressed to each of the five criteria of RSA 674:33, I(a)(2), as RSA 676:3, I requires; and

G. Consider whether a member who supplied the only evidence upon a contested criterion, recited it as a finding, and moved the relief, should participate in the reconsideration of that finding; and

H. Grant such further relief as is just.

Respectfully submitted,

Nickolas J. Levasseur
